-Dr. Clauston, of the Edinburgh Asylum, Scotland, is substituting milk diet for stimulants in treating his patients. In very acute cases, both of depression and maniacal exultation, where the disordered working of the frame tends rapidly to exhaust the strength, he relies more and more on milk and eggs made into liquid custards. This certainly looks like a sensible subst tute for stimulants under such circumstances.

In the center of a b'g circle of gold watches in a Maiden Lane (New York City) watchmaker's window is a handsome open-faced chromometer with this placard: "The first watch ever made in America by machinery." It is a relic. It was made in Roxbury, Mass., about 1850. It runs for eight days with a single winding. It was the first watch ever made in this country that was entirely manufactured by machinery. It is as perfect as the standard watch of to day, and differs but litthe in the general plan of construction. -N. Y. Tribune.

-The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has been experimenting recently with a patent which is to do away with the belf-rope on passenger trains. The experiments are being conducted on the Pittsburgh division, and the patent is the production of the Westinghouse Air Brake Company. It consists of a communication by air pressure with a small whistle in the cab of the engineer. The ho e through which the air is conducted will be independent of that communicating with the brakes. The connection between the passenger car and the air-tube is from the rear of the coach, near the closet, where there is a button, which is pressed by the conductor when he desires to signal the engineer. - Philadelphia Press.

Feeding Corn to Fowls.

In feeding for winter laying, the first rule is that fowls will not lay when fed on corn alone. The next thing is to know what, when, and how to feed them. The "feed ng of whole corn and producing eggs, while feed ng corn with other food brings better results. At the same time fowls can not, or will not, lay without the corn. As stated before, corn is the staple grain, and when kept within their reach they will consume a less quantity than when it is thrown daily to them with no other feed. There is a difference between feeding fowls for laying and for fattening. Yet a certain amount of fat is a necessity, and they will regulate this matter themselves if allowed the privilege.

Nature in this case is the better teacher. Where the first feed is given with regularity in the morning, fowls that are in health and well fed will not fill the crops to repletion on whole corn; but one that is half starved, or only sees corn once or twice a day, will do it as often as the occasion offers. Vegetable food, animal diet, and milk when it can be afforded, are appreciated and required by laying fowls. If these varied appetite prompts. If the corn is kept from them, they are apt to overload when it is given. For this reason poultry keepers should give in winter b th animal and vegetable food, allowing only a scant ration My meaning is to feed sufficient other diets, so that the fowl will not partake too freely of the corn. I feed corn once a day, and that at night, in cold weather, when they will consume more than in warm weather. If fed other grains, which also are necessary for egg-production, or buckwheat, the consumption of corn is much less; still they require some corn. The object in feeding laying hens isto produce strength without making at the same time an excess of fat. There is also a difference in breeds. A rule which would apply to one class of fowls would not do for another. To non-setters (which are the continuous layers) there is little danger of an over feeding of corn, if other food is given in sufficient quantity and regularity. Fowls should never be neglected when confined; neither should they be stinted in quantity of drink. To the Asiatics the rule of only a scant ration of corn once a day might be applied, while the opposite rule would apply to the smaller breeds. The "scant ration of corn once a day" is intended to apply to egg production. In "winter-feeding of towls" the keeping of corn within their reach is advocated.—Country Gentleman.

Unknown to the Public—The Details in Pull

One of the most remarkable occurrences ever given to the public, which took place ere in our midst, has just come to our knowledge and will undoubtedly awaken as much surprise and attract as great at-tention as it has already in newspaper circles. The facts are, briefly, as follows: Mr. William A. Crombie, a young man clear as formerly; my appetite was uncer tain and I was unaccountably tired. It tain and I was unaccountably tired. It was an effort to arise in the morning and yet I could not sleep at night. My mouth tasted badly, I had a faint all-gone sensation in the pit of my stomach that food did not satisfy, while my hands and feet felt cold and clammy. I was nervous and irritable, and lost all enthusiasm. At times my head would seem to whirl and my heart palpitated terribly. I had no energy, no ambition, and I seemed indifferent of the present and thoughtless for the future. I ambition, and I seemed indifferent of the present and thoughtless for the future. I tried to shake the feeling off and pursuade myself it was simply a cold or a little malaria. But it would not go. I was determined not to give up, and so time passed along and all the while I was getting worse. It was about this time that I noticed I had begun to bloat fearfully. My limbs were

is an animated something, but I should like to know what.' In this condition I passed several weeks of the greatest agony.
"Finally, one Saturday night, the misery culminated. Nature could endure no more. I became irrational and apparently insensible. Cold sweat gathered on my forehead; my eyes became glazed and my throat rattled. I seemed to be in another sphere and with other surroundings. I knew nothing of what occurred around me, although I have since learned it was conhough I have since learned it was conthough I have since learned it was considered as death by those who stood by. It was to me a quiet state, and yet one of great agony. I was helpless, hopeless, and pain was my only companion. I remember trying to see what was beyond me, but the mist before my eyes was too great. I tried to reason, but I had lost all power. I felt that it was death, and realized how felt that it was death, and realized how terrible it was. At last the strain upon my mind gave way and all was a blank. How long this continued I do not know, but at last I realized the presence of friends and recognized my mother. I then thought it was earth, but was not certain. I grad-ually regained consciousness, however, and had, during my unconsciousness, been giv-ing me a preparation I had never taken before, and the next day, under the influence of this treatment, the bloating began to disappear and from that time on I steadily disappear and from that time on I steadily improved, antil to-day I am as well as ever before in my life, have no traces of the terrible acute Bright's disease, which so nearly killed me, and all through the wonderful instrumentality of Warner's Safe Cure, the remedy that brought me to life after I was virtually in another world."

"You have had an unusual experience, Mr. Crombie," said the writer who had been breathlessly listening to the recital.
"Yes, I think I have," was the reply,
"and it has been a valuable lesson to me. I am certain, though, there are thousands of men and women at this very moment near killing me, and they do not know it.

I believe kidney disease is the most deceptive trouble in the world. It comes like a

Rev. A. R. Bartlett, formerly paster of the M. E. Church, at Birmingham, and now of Schoolcraft, Mich., in response to a telegram, replied:

"Mr. W. A. Crombie was a member of my congregation at the time of his sick-ness. The prayers of the church were re-quested for him on two different occasions. was with him the day he was reported by his physicians as dying, and consider his recovery almost a miracle."

Not one person in a million ever comes so near death as did Mr. Crombie and then recover, but the men and women who are drifting toward the same end are legion. To note the slightest symptoms, to realize their significance and to meet them in time by the remedy which has been shown to be most efficient, is a duty from which there can be no escape. They are fortunate who do this; they are on the sure road to death who neglect it.

said:
"I had been having most peculiar sensations for a long while. My head felt dull and heavy; my eyesight did not seem so and heavy; my appetite was uncerswollen so that by pressing my fingers upon them deep depressions would be made. My face also began to enlarge, and continued to until I could scarcely see out of my eyes. One of my friends, describing my appearance at that time, said: 'It

the pain lessened. I found that my friends

tive trouble in the world. It comes like a thief in the night. It has no certain symptoms, but seems to attack each one differently. It is quiet, treacherous, and all the more dangerous. When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILETSY or FAILING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infalliole remedy. Give Express and Post-Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you.

" I find that in addition to the pure spirits contained in their composition, they contain the extracts of hops and other well-known and highly approved medicinal roots, leaves and tinctures in quantities sufficient to ren-der the article what the makers claim it to be, to wit, a medicinal preparation and not a beverage—unfit and unsafe to be used except as a medicine.

"From a careful analysis of their formula —which was attested under oath—I find that in every wine-glassful of Hop Bitters, the active medicinal properties aside from the distilled spirits are equal to a full dose for an adult, which fact, in my opinion, subjects it to an internal revenue tax as a medicinal bitter."

Hardened Liver. Five years ago I broke down with kidney and liver complaint and rheumatism. Since then I have been unable to be about at all. My liver became hard like wood; my limbs were puffed up and filled with water. All the best physicians agreed that nothing could cure me. I resolved to try Hop Bitters; I have used seven bottles; the hardness has all gone from my liver, the swelling from my limbs, and it has worked a miracle in my case; otherwise I would have been

Poverty and Suffering. "I was dragged down with debt, poverty and suffering for years, caused by a sick family and large bils for doctoring. I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I commenced using Hop Bitters, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have seen a sick day since, and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost; I know it."

The experience in the treatment of Cancer with Swift's Specific (S. S. S) would seem to warrant us in saying that it will core this much dreaded scoorge. Persons so afflicted are invited to correspond with us. I believe Swift's Specific has saved my life. I had virtually lost use of the upper part of my body and my arms from the poisonous effects of a large cancer on my neck, from which I had suffered for twenty years. S. S. S. has relieved me of all soreness, and the poison is being forced out of my system. I will soon be well. W. R. Robison, Davisboro, Gs.

Two months ago my attention was called to the case of a woman afflicted with a cancer on her shoulder at least five inches in circumference, angry, painful; and giving the patient no rest day or night for six montha. I obtained a supply of Swift's Sociate for her. She has taken five bottles, and the alocer is entirely healed up, only a very small scab remaining, and her health is better than for five years past; seems to be perfectly cured. REV. JESSE H. CAMPBELL, Columbus, Ga.
